A Practical Introduction to External Skeletal Fixation

A highly practical, full day course combining introductory concept and key-skill lectures with ‘hands-on’ practical sessions under the guidance of approachable and highly experienced surgeons. This course is aimed at veterinary surgeons with an interest in learning basic external fixation techniques. No previous experience is required, but some background knowledge of orthopaedics would be advantageous.

Delegates should leave the course with an understanding of external fixation techniques. These skills can be transferred to many fractures commonly encountered in general practice.
